

Application for CIE National Committee or CIE Associate National Committee

Members of the CIE are approved National Committees. A country seeking to join the Commission shall form, with the co-operation of organizations within that country having a special interest in light and lighting, one National Committee. This National Committee must submit evidence that it meets all necessary requirements, and shall send its application to the Central Bureau. Approval of the application is decided by the National Committees.

Countries that have established a new National Committee, or developing countries which have a National Committee already, may join the CIE on a trial basis, as an Associate National Committee, before becoming full members.

Applicants wishing to join CIE as Associate National Committee must submit evidence that they meet all necessary requirements. The application for membership must be sent to the Central Bureau. Approval of the application is decided by the National Committees. This membership is granted for a four-year period, and may be renewed for one further four-year period according to the decision of the National Committees. An Associate National Committee may request membership as a National Committee at any time within the four-year period. An Associate National Committee may participate in the technical work of the CIE, may appoint a representative to attend the CIE General Assembly and one Observer Member to each CIE Division, but shall have no voting rights, neither in administrative nor in technical matters.
